MLADOROSSOV MONARCHIST PARTY

SECRET

Comment (AB-102): In reference report source named the MLADOROSSOV Party as having been penetrated by Soviet I.S. and representing the "aristocracy of the NKVD". He was requested to present more information on the subject. Information given below is believed to be substantially correct.

1.-The MLADOROSSOV Party was organized in 1924-25, at Munich, by White Russian General BISKUPSKI. The aim of this monarchist legitimist party was to gather the Russian emigrant youth around the newly "crowned Tsar", Grand Duke Cyril. The party had two chairmen, KAZEM-BECK and Prince SERGEY BOBOLENSKY.

In 1932 the party fell under the influence of Gen. BISKUPSKI's assistant Col. HOMUTOV, who was residing in Berlin at the time. HOMUTOV appeared to be an ardent monarchist-legitimist leader but at the same time was actually the resident representative of the KRO-NKVD for Germany. HOMUTOV used this organization to collect information on the activities of White Russian anti-Soviet groups and succeeded in penetrating the BPSNP as well as the ROVS (Ref. 167). In this manner the MLADOROSSOV party actually became an intelligence collecting agency for the Soviets. This was particularly true in the Balkans. HOMUTOV's connection with KRO was eventually discovered but he managed to escape prior to being arrested by the GESTAPO. The Soviet control of this organization continued even after HOMUTOV's escape. An outstanding MLADOROSSOV leader, ELITA-VILTCHEVSKI, representing the White Russian Paris branch of this organization, was secretly cooperating with HOMUTOV and assumed his "duties" upon the latter's escape.

When the German government expelled "Tsar" Cyril, the center of MLADOROSSOV activities was changed to Paris. ELITA-VILTCHEVSKI succeeded in gaining the confidence of KAZEM-BECK and finally converted him to work for the Soviet I.S. Under their leadership the party's ideals were somewhat changed. Though they still claimed to be a monarchist-legitimist organization, the party accepted the "soviets" as the basis upon which monarchy could be restored. They also accepted all accomplishments of the Soviet regime.

The aim of this monarchist legitimist party was to gather the Russian emigrant youth around the newly "crowned Tsar", Grand Duke Cyril. The party had two chairmen, KAZEM-BECK and Prince SERGEI ORODASSKY.

In 1932 the party fell under the influence of Gen. BISKUPSKI's assistant Col. HOVUTOV, who was residing in Berlin at the time. HOVUTOV appeared to be an ardent monarchist-legitimist leader but at the same time was actually the resident representative of the KRO-NKVD for Germany. HOVUTOV used this organization to collect information on the activities of White Russian anti-Soviet groups and succeeded in penetrating the MOSEF as well as the ROVS (cf. 157). In this manner the MLADOROSOV party actually became an intelligence collecting agency for the Soviets. This was particularly true in the Balkans. HOVUTOV's connection with KRO was eventually discovered but he managed to escape prior to being arrested by the GOSSAI. The Soviet control of this organization continued even after HOVUTOV's escape. An outstanding MLADOROSOV leader, MIHA-VILTCHEVSKI, representing the White Russian Paris branch of this organization, was secretly cooperating with HOVUTOV and assumed his "duties" upon the latter's escape.

When the German government expelled "Tsar" Cyril, the center of MLADOROSOV activities was changed to Paris. Though they still claimed to be a monarchist-legitimist organization, the party accepted the "soviets" as the basis upon which "anarchy" could be restored. They also accepted all "accomplishments of the Soviet regime".
